

It Will Come and I will Know It

Received February 27th, 2008

---

It is not for you to know the time or place of events to come; all will be revealed in proper order. This is because the Law of Evolution requires that in your realm one event must happen first, laying a groundwork so that something else may occur. In your world all things have their time and place and do not happen simultaneously, as in other Realities. Within the fishbowl of your one lifetime in the human plane, things flow in an order: the order Evolution. As a result, every day you are laying groundwork for something else to occur in the next moment of your life.

And so it is that patience must be practiced—dutifully, eternally, deeply and truly. If you are patient in what is, it will unfold most expediently and the future will come quickly. Growth will seem to happen effortlessly. If you are impatient, the negative energies you emit will repel the positive ones that could have helped you grow. Your Evolution will seem to be a struggle. You know this to be true, for you have already witnessed as much in your own life as well as in the lives of others.

Therefore affirm, “It will come and I will know it.” Use this phrase to help you cultivate total and utter patience. Learn to live in complete faith that your Highest Path will reveal Itself in the proper time and that you will know It when It arrives. This is how illuminated civilizations of ancient times lived and this is how you should live now. The ancients mastered this art and learned to live in the way of patience, understanding that all things are built one atop another.

To practice this, spend some time in Nature taking in all It has to offer. Become aware that Evolution is taking place when you sit outside and absorb pure Energy, oxygen and Light. In that moment you are like the trees, for you are opening to the elements and from those elements other things will surely grow. Your body will take the Energy from the Sun and the air you breathe and transform them into the forces which enliven your physical form.

As you sit quietly, patiently witness how the Sun, oxygen and Energy drawn into your body nourish it and continue the process of growth already unfolding within you. Let this remind you that on your spiritual Journey, forces are dutifully at work every day to help deepen your Understanding, just as the Sun helps the trees grow a bit every day.

Remember this lesson my friend, for patience is of the utmost importance. As you master it, you will find that your Truth unfolds ever more effortlessly and with greater efficiency, drawing you ever more quickly toward your Goal.

- L. Taylor

www.hopeofthenewage.com

Copyright © 2010 by L. Taylor All Rights Reserved

---